The North Stealington Grange fair, a real old-fashioned agricultural exhibition, with just enough medern innovation, to put pep into the annual event, opened Tuesday, with an average opening day attendance. The fair will continue through Wednesday and Thursday, Patrons note marked improvement ever previous fairs held by the grange. In addition to the ordinary features there will be an exhibition of grange floats and a cattle auction sale today (Wednesday) with tests of strength of horses and oxen Thursday. The committee is making every effort to please patrons, and has not forgotten the commissary department, where wholesome food, contributed in the main from North Stonlington homes, cooked in home-style, and is served at pre-war prices.
